Additional Information

Written Communication: Six credits in English composition (ENGL1111 Literature and Composition I and ENGL1112 Literature and Composition II).

Speech/Professional Communication: Three credits in a course substantially concerned with public speaking, oral, written and/or professional communication/presentations (e.g. SPCH1155 Public Speaking, COMM2101 Professional Communication).

Ethical and Moral Analysis: Three credits in a course from any discipline that is substantially concerned with ethical theories and questions such as a course in philosophy, religion or a course with "ethics" in its title (e.g. PHIL2255 Business Ethics, PHIL2261 Ethical Issues in Computer Information Technology, PHIL2351 Medical Law and Ethics).

Quantitative Analysis: Three of the six credits must be in a college-level mathematics course (e.g. MATH1131 College Mathematics I). The other three credits can be from a second mathematics course or from a statistics, logic, computer science, computer technology or other course that requires substantial quantitative analysis (e.g. MATH1132 College Mathematics II, MATH1142 Introduction to Statistics, PHIL1101 Introduction to Logic, MIS2151 Electronic Commerce and Beyond).

Scientific Analysis: Six credits in course work from biology, chemistry, physics, environmental/earth/planetary sciences and/or other course that requires substantial scientific analysis (e.g. SCIE2008 Chemistry in Everyday Life, SCIE2010 Contemporary Environmental Issues). Courses need not be from the same scientific discipline.

Arts and Culture: Six credits from any combination of studio, performing or creative arts or global studies/culture including, but not limited to, computer animation, photography, creative writing, dance, film production, globalization, culture and identity, world literature. Courses may be from the same discipline/category (e.g. ART1071 Film and Society, ENGL2211 Masterpieces of Literature I, ENGL3111 Introduction to Memoir Writing, SOCI3610 Multicultural Perspectives).

Social and Behavioral Sciences: Six credits from any combination of courses in the social sciences (anthropology, economics, criminology, geography, political science, sociology) or behavioral sciences (psychology or communication studies). Courses may be in the same discipline; at least three credits must be at the 2000 level or above.

Humanities: Six credits in any combination of courses in history, literature, philosophy, art history, film (not filmmaking). Courses may be in the same discipline; at least three credits must be at the 2000 level or above.

University Core: Eight credits of University Core courses are required; however, UNIV1001 Transitioning to College Life and UNIV1002 Preparing for Professional Life are waived for adult learners. If waived, these two credits can be replaced by transfer credits or an additional two free elective credits.

International Perspective: Three credits in a course from any discipline that has an international, multinational or global perspective on its topic(s).

Advanced Writing: Three credits in a writing-intensive course at the 2000 level or above (e.g. ENGL3111 Introduction to Memoir Writing, ENGL3115 Food Writing, ENGL3141 Travel Writing). Specialization: A minimum of 18 credits that provides the student an opportunity to pursue a single area of study in depth. Alternatively, an adviser may approve a combination of courses that makes up an individualized, cohesive unit of study. A minimum of nine credits must be taken in FDU graded course work and be at the 2000 level or above. Certain restrictions may apply.

Free Electives: It is recommended that interdisciplinary electives be chosen to support the area of specialization.

Credit for Experiential Learning: Credit for college level learning that has taken place outside of the traditional college classroom may be available through FDU's Experiential Learning Assessment Program that includes standardized exams (e.g. CLEP), challenge exams and/or ACE-approved credit recommendations.
