

About me:

Costa Rican native, and New York-based designer Devyn Orozco, started her career in fashion as a fashion model and after a brief time working within the industry, realized her true passion lied behind the scenes. She then began pursuing her passion to create high fashion garments and study the art of design. Fueled by her youthful and adventurous spirit, Orozco's motivated to create a brand that fights self-doubt and empowers the body that the clothing adorns. Fashion-wise, Orozco finds new inspirations as she matures into a more sophisticated designer. Starting from being inspired by Carolina Herrera's work, Orozco found herself transfixed by the works of some of the greatest fashion houses in the world. From Alexander McQueen, John Galliano, Dior, and Vivienne Westwood —, Orozco draws inspiration and motivation from these fashion brands and aims to become a household name just as they are.