

Connor Pedrazzi

Connor has always had an eye for detail and design. Since his childhood he has expressed his creativity and critical thinking skills through hands on tasks and projects. He plans on becoming an architect due to his passion of designing structures and his fascination of watching ideas become reality. Connor immediately concluded that architecture was the major for him once he took a drafting class in high school. Although he lacks an artistic ability, he greatly makes up for it with his strong desire to push the boundaries and to create something that he can truly be proud of. Connor is determined to learn everything there is about architecture and is eager to start designing future structures that the world can enjoy for generations.
