Recognizing National Suicide Prevention Awareness Month

In conjunction with the Counseling and Student Success department at CCM, the college's Art and Design Gallery will be hosting an exhibition to recognize National Suicide Prevention Awareness Month.

The exhibition, titled "Marisa Rincón: An Impression of Life," will feature the artwork of Marisa Rincón, a 2007 CCM Fine Arts graduate, who died by suicide this past February.

The exhibit consists of more than 20 works by Rincón. Also featured in the show are painted portraits of Rincón created by prominent New Jersey artists Tim Maher, John B. Wolff and Lorraine deSmet. The exhibit, which is free and open to the public, runs August 21 to October 13, in Gallery B, which is the outer portion of the gallery.

Here's what to talk about this week:

Once the refreshed site is launched, the next step will be to obtain the assistance of a consulting firm who can provide the college with best practices to make it easier for the college's wide range of audiences to find what they need. The firm also will assist the college in ensuring greater conformity with the American with Disabilities Act (ADA) requirements. As part of that process, a college-wide website redesign committee will be established to work with the consulting firm to help ensure the redesigned site best addresses the college's goals and supports its strategic initiatives.

The step one process has involved moving the website to a new content management system, WordPress, both to provide a simpler way to update the site and to provide a site that resizes itself based on what device – desktop computer, phone or tablet – is being used.

The move to WordPress also will allow for more customization than has been possible with the current content management system. For example, photos can now be displayed in larger sizes and alerts can include hyperlinks that connect to additional information.

Once the site is launched, training sessions will be scheduled to familiarize departments on how they can best make updates to their pages.

Department of Public Safety Hosts FEMA / DHS Training

The Department of Public Safety hosted emergency preparedness training on campus, July 26 – 28. The three-day training was offered to first responders and campus emergency response staff and attended by members of CCM's emergency management team. The course was provided by the National Domestic Preparedness Consortium which is a training partner with the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

The curriculum was designed and presented by the Texas A&M Engineering Extension Service which has been leading homeland security training since 1998. The training, "Managing Critical Incidents at Institutions of Higher Education," focused on effectively managing a critical incident that may significantly impact the campus by applying and implementing an all-hazards, command and management team approach. The instruction involved group exercises and facilitated discussions using the National Incident Management System and the National Response Framework.

The training allowed participants to build on their current knowledge to learn how to develop a whole community approach capable of responding to large-scale expanding incidents. In 2016, training was also presented at the campus through DHS/FEMA which provided two days of training to the CCM emergency management team on how to respond to campus emergencies
