The Public Art Committee – Inspiring the Community through Art on Campus

As donors increasingly sought to contribute works of art to CCM, faculty and staff responded by forming a Public Art Committee that has since grown the college's art collection to nearly 400 pieces. The group's mission is to grow, manage and exhibit the art collection to inspire and educate the campus community and the public.

Two recent acquisitions, totaling 119 pieces, were curated by Professor of Photography Hrvoje Slovinc, a committee member.

Plans for each of the acquisitions began last fall. "In October 2021, we were given access to art collections from three major donors by fine art appraiser and advisor Jane Lifer," says Slovinc. Approximately 68 mixed media pieces in total were curated. Most recently, he curated 51 works of photography shot by 14 distinguished artists courtesy of The Museum Project.

Since its inception 10 years ago, The Museum Project has donated more than 6,631 photographs to 225 permanent fine art collections in 49 states, Washington D.C., Australia, Canada, France, Great Britain, Ireland, Luxembourg and Switzerland. The institutions include Brown University, Cornell Fine Art Museum, Princeton University Art Museum, Los Angeles County Museum of Art, and now CCM.

"I'm so happy CCM joined this impressive list," says Slovinc. "The 51 pieces from The Museum Project are here on campus. This along with the three collections from Jane Lifer has grown our collection by almost 120 new pieces for a total close to 400."

The two-year grant from Impact 100 for Dover College Promise (DCP) has been completed with stellar reviews from the grantor.

"Impact 100 is thankful for CCM/DCP's faithful commitment to providing transformational educational opportunities for first-generation/low-income Dover middle and high school students," said Debby Seme, president of the organization. "As President, there is nothing that gives me greater joy than to see how well our partnership with our grant recipients results in such wonderful outcomes for our communities."

The grant provided the seed funds to get DCP up and running, which the college continues to support. A partnership between CCM and The Education Center in Dover and the Dover School District, DCP provides motivated low-income middle and high school students with the opportunity to secure a pathway to college, offering them workshops, mentoring and other support services, along with a CCM Foundation scholarship should they decided to attend the college.

Emergency Evacuation Drills

Emergency evacuation drills occur throughout each semester with the purpose of preparing our community to execute an organized evacuation in case of an actual emergency. At CCM, evacuation drills serve to train the campus community, as well as test procedures. Our Emergency Evacuation Procedure provides more information and the location of evacuation staging areas. Evacuation drills were limited when the campus population was reduced due to the pandemic. They will start again very soon. Please take the time to review the procedure.

The CCM Visual Arts Student Exhibit at MPAC

The Visual Arts Student exhibit at the Mayo Performing Arts Center (MPAC) is up and running. The show runs through April 18. A reception, free and open to employees, takes place on Wednesday, March 30, from 5 – 7 p.m. in the Art Upstairs Gallery at MPAC in Morristown. An awards ceremony will take place during the reception.

If you would like to view the exhibition other than at the reception, you can visit the gallery prior to performances and during intermissions as a ticketed patron or by appointment by contacting Charles Miller at 973-539-0345 ext. 6506 or Lee Kaloidis at 973-539-0345 ext. 6587. MPAC is at 100 South Street, Morristown, NJ 07960.

Did anyone in your department earn a degree, certificate or award or had an accomplishment worth recognizing? Please send any kudos from your department to cmcardle@ccm.edu for inclusion in the slide presentation at the April 7 Recognition Ceremony.
