Biography:

Nicole Rosano was born in Hackettstown, New Jersey. She spent her childhood in White Township, New Jersey where she attended White Township Consolidated School from kindergarten to eighth grade. During seventh grade, Nicole became interested in art. She always enjoyed creating, but when her art teacher encouraged her to experiment with various mediums, Nicole quickly fell in love with fine art. During her first year of high school, Nicole began illustrating a self-published children's book titled My Special Cupcake. In collaboration with the author, Julie Lyn Klingel, My Special Cupcake was published on October 5, 2015. The book focused on raising awareness for children with gluten allergies. Other high school art projects to note were the various murals Nicole was invited to paint around her high school and town. She was asked by her high school's Travis Manion Foundation representative to paint their logo in her high school. In addition, Nicole was in charge of her senior class mural, a tradition at Belvidere High School. The last mural Nicole took part of during her senior year was for the Belvidere Regional Pool. Nicole, along with two of her friends, painted sea creatures on the walls of the changing rooms at the pool. Following her graduation from high school, Nicole pursued her fine art education at the County College of Morris. Currently, Nicole is in the process of completing her last semester and will be getting her Associate of Fine Arts in May. Once her time at CCM is over, Nicole is planning on continuing her education at a four year institution. After she completes her Bachelor's Degree, Nicole plans on pursuing a career in book illustration and design where she can combine two of her favorite things: literature and art.
